The reduction in the price of flour is brought by the splendid yield of the new crop of wheat which is now being harvested, and which is said to be of the finest quality of any crop raised for a number of years, and although the acreage is not up to the average the yield will be abundant and almost a bumper crop is promised in the Ohio valley.

CHAPTER III.

AS the supreme reward of virtue the good American is promised a visit to Paris when he dies. Those, however, of our sagacious fellow countrymen who can afford to make the trip usually manage to see Lutetia before crossing the river Styx. Most Americans like Paris—some like it so well that they have made it their permanent home—although it must be added that in their admiration they rarely include the Frenchman. For that matter, we are not as a nation particularly fond of any foreigner, largely because we do not understand him, while the foreigner, for his part is quite willing to return the compliment. He gives the Yankee credit for commercial smartness, which has built up America's great material prosperity, but he has the utmost contempt for our acquaintance with art and no profound respect for us as scientists.

The logic of this position, set forth in Le Boir in an article on the New World, appealed strongly to Jefferson. He was at the Café de la Paix in Paris, and it was five o'clock, the magic hour of the apéritif, when the glutton takes his wife to devour his stomach and work up an appetite for renewed his son's evil. Jefferson was thoroughly in earnest. If needs be he would force the son rather than be forced into questionable business methods against which his whole manhood revolted. Jefferson's Hyde was strongly about these matters and gave them more thought than would be expected of most young men with his opportunities. In fact, he was not yet thirty, but he had done a great deal of reading, and he took a keen interest in all the political and sociological questions of the hour. In personal appearance he was the type of man that both men and women like—tall and athletic looking, with a smooth face and clean-cut features. He had the steel blue eyes and the fighting jaw of his father, and when he smiled he displayed two even rows of very white teeth. He was cordial with men, being mainly, frank and open in his relations with them, and women admired him greatly, although they were somewhat intimidated by his grave and serious manner. The truth was that he was rather diffident with women, largely owing to lack of experience with them.

He had never felt the slightest inclination for business. He had the artistic temperament strongly developed, and his personal home was a little common with Wall street and its feverish stock manipulating. When he was younger he had dreamed of a literary or art career. At one time he had even thought of going on the stage, but it was to art that he turned finally. From an early age he had shown considerable skill as a draftsman, and after a two years' course at the Academy of Design convinced him that this was his true vocation. He had begun by illustrating for the book publishers and for the magazine, and with the usual rebuffs and disappointments, but, refusing to be discouraged, he had kept on and soon the tide turned. His drawings began to be accepted. They appeared first in one magazine, then in another, until one day, to his great joy, he received an order from an important firm of publishers for six drawings to be used in illustrating a famous novel. This was the beginning of his real success. His illustrations were ordered and almost as much as the book, and from that time on everything was easy. He was in great demand by the publishers, and very soon the young artist, who had begun his career of independence on nothing a year, so to speak, found himself in a handsomely appointed studio in Bryant park, with more orders coming in than he could handle, and enjoying an income of little less than $5,000 a year. The money was all the sweeter to Jefferson in that he felt he was earning his money honestly. This summer he was giving himself a well deserved vacation, and he had come to Europe partly to see Paris and partly to recuperate after the labor of his new novel, "The American Occultus," a book which was then the talk of two hemispheres.

It was true, he thought, the foreigner had indeed learned the secret of enjoying life. There was assuredly something else in the world beyond mere money getting. His father was a slave to it, but he would never be. He was resolved on that. Yet, with all his ideas of emancipation and progress, Jefferson was a very "tainted money" certainly the lot of the world's richest man was far from being an enviable one.

That is why Jefferson had resolved to strike out for himself. He had warded off the golden yoke which his father proposed to put on his shoulders, declining the lucrative position made for him in the Empire Trading company, and he had gone so far as to refuse also the private income his father offered to settle on him. He would earn his own living. A man who has his bread buttered for him seldom accomplishes anything, he had said, and while he had said that he was not to be angry at this open opposition to his will, he was secretly pleased at sequences of the insanity of miniature minds," he had summoned Jefferson promptly to his presence. He had told his son that all idea of marriage in that quarter was out of the question for two reasons: One was that Judge Rosemore was his most bitter enemy, and the other was that he had hoped to see his son, his destined successor, marry a woman of whom he, Hyder, Sr., could approve. He knew of such a woman, one who would make a far more desirable mate than Miss Rosemore. He alluded, of course, to Kate Roberts, the pretty daughter of his old enemy, the senator. The family interests would benefit by this alliance, which was desirable from every point of view.

Jefferson had listened respectfully until his father had finished and then grimly remarked that only one point of view had been overlooked, his own. He did not care for Miss Roberts. He did not think she really cared for him. The marriage was out of the question. Jefferson's father, in a rage, declared that Jefferson was opposing his will as he always did, and ending with the threat that if his son married Shirley Rosemore without his consent he would disinherit him.

Jefferson was cogitating on these incidents of the last few months when a suddenly a female voice which he quickly recognized called out in English: "Hello! Mr. Ryder."

He looked up and saw two ladies, one young, the other middle aged, smiling at him from an open carriage which had drawn up to the curb. Jefferson jumped from his seat, upsetting his chair and starting two nervous Frenchmen in his hurry, and hastened out, hat in hand.

"Why, Miss Rosemore, what are you doing out driving?" he asked. "You know you and Mrs. Blake promised to dine with me tonight. I was coming round to the hotel in a few moments."

Mrs. Blake was a younger sister of Shirley's mother. Her husband had died a few years previously, leaving her a small income, and when she had heard of her niece's contemplated trip to Europe she had decided to come to Paris to meet her and introduce her to her father. The two women were stopping at the Grand Hotel close by, while Jefferson had found accommodations at the Athenaeum.

Shirley explained. Her aunt wanted to go to the dressmaker's, and she herself was most anxious to go to the Luxembourg Gardens to hear the music. Would he take her? Then they met Mrs. Blake at the hotel at 7 o'clock and all went to dinner. Was he willing?

Mrs. Blake said she would get out here. Her dressmaker was close by, in the Rue Auber, and she would walk back to the hotel to meet them at 8 o'clock. Jefferson assisted her to alight and escorted her as far as the porte cochere of the modiste's, a couple of doors away. When she returned to the carriage, Shirley had already told the coachman where to go. He got in, and the fairs started.

"No," said Shirley, "tell me what you have been doing with yourself all day."

Jefferson was busily arranging the papers on the table, and he was spending more time in the task than he had been in the past. He was spending more time in the task than he had been in the past. He was spending more time in the task than he had been in the past.

CHAPTER IV.
"TELL me, what do the papers say?"
Setting himself comfort, he asked Shirley to tell him the news. Shirley questioned Jefferson with eagerness, even anxiety. She had been impatiently awaiting the arrival of the newspapers from "home," for so much depended on this first effort. She knew her book had been praised in some quarters, and her publishers had shown her that the sales were good every day, but she was curious to learn how it had been received by the reviewers.

Shirley was not beautiful, but here was a face that never failed to attract attention. It was a thoughtful and interesting face, with an intellectual expression and a keen, earnest gaze. She was a woman who had both brain power and ideals, and yet who, at the same time, was in perfect sympathy with the world. She was fair in complexion, and her fine brown eyes, alertly reflective and alert, were shaded by long dark lashes. Her eyebrows were delicately arched, and she had a good nose. She wore her hair well of the forehead, which was broader than in the average woman, suggesting good intellect. Her mouth, however, was her strongest feature. It was well shaped, but there were firm lines about it that suggested unusual will power. She was a woman of strong, healthy looking teeth of dazzling whiteness. She was a little over medium height, slender, and she carried herself with that unmistakable air of well bred independence that bespeaks birth and culture. She dressed stylishly, and while her gowns were of rich material and of a cut suggesting expensive modistes, she was always so quietly attired and in such perfect taste that after leaving her one could never recall what she had on.

"Tell me," she repeated, "what do the papers say about the book?"
"Ray?" he asked. "Why, simply that you've written the biggest book of the year, that's all!"
"Really?" she said. "Do all men say that?"
She was fairly excited now, and in her enthusiasm she grasped Jefferson's broad, sunburnt hand which was lying on the carriage rug. He tried to appear unconscious of the contact, which made his every nerve tingle, as he proceeded to tell her the gist of the reviews he had read that afternoon.

"Isn't that splendid?" she exclaimed when he had finished. Then she added: "I wonder if your father has seen it?"
Jefferson grinned, and he said something on his conscience, and this was the first time that he had got rid of it. He replied laconically:

"He probably has read it by this time. I sent him a copy myself." The instant that the words were out of his mouth he was sorry, for Shirley's face had changed color.

You sent him a copy of 'The American Occultus'?" she cried. "Then he'll guess who wrote the book?"
"Oh, no, he won't," rejoined Jefferson calmly. "He has no right to know it. I mailed it anonymously."

Shirley breathed a sigh of relief. It was so important that her identity should remain a secret. As daughter of a supreme court judge she had to be most careful. She would not embarrass her father by anything in the world.

"Have you heard from home recently?"
"I had a letter from father last week. Everything was going on all right when I left. Father says he misses me sadly and that mother is ailing, as usual."

The smile, and Jefferson smiled too. They both knew by experience that nothing really serious ailed Mrs. Rosemore, who was a good deal of a hypochondriac and always so filled with aches and pains that on the few occasions when she really felt well she was genuinely amazed.

The coachman stopped suddenly in front of beautiful gilded gates. It was the Luxembourg, and through the tall railings they caught a glimpse of well-kept lawns, sparkling fountains, and brightly dressed children playing. From the distance came the stirring strains of a brass band.

The coachman drove up to the curb, and Jefferson jumped down, assisting Shirley to alight.

They entered the gardens, following the sweet scenting of the roses, and Jefferson was sitting on the curb, and Shirley was standing by his side, and they were both looking at each other with a smile.

"I can't say here forever, couldn't you?"
"With you—yes," answered Jefferson, with a significant smile.

Shirley tried to look angry. She strictly discouraged these conventional sentimental speeches which constantly flung her in her face.

"Now, you know I don't like you to talk that way, Mr. Ryder. It's most unedifying," she said. "I'm sure you know very well that you're great love for the name, and if you persist you'll end by including me in your hatred of the hero of your book."

Shirley looked at him with amused curiosity.

"What do you mean," she asked. "What you want me to call you?"
"Oh, I don't know," he stammered, rather intimidated by this self possessed young woman, who looked him straight in the face and said: "Why not call me Jefferson? Mr. Ryder is so formal."

Shirley laughed outright, a merry, unrestrained laugh of honest laughter, which made the passers turn their heads and smile, too, commenting the while on the stylish appearance of the two Americans when they took for sweethearts. After all, reasoned Shirley, he was right. They had been together now nearly every hour in the day for four or five days. It was absurd to call him Mr. Ryder. So, addressing him with mock gravity, she said:

"You're right, Mr. Ryder—I mean Jefferson. You're quite right. You are Jefferson from this time on, only remember—here she shook her gloved finger at him warningly—"mind you dress yourself! No more such sentimental speeches as you made just now."

Jefferson beamed. He felt at least as good as the king of the world, and he was not alone in the world. To hide the embarrassment his gratification he said: "I'll be pulled out of my watch and exclaimed:

"Why, it's a quarter past six. We shall have all we can do to get back to the hotel and the Theatre d'Orléans. Shirley rose at once, although loath to leave.

"I had no idea it was so late," she said. "I'll be right in a minute." Mockingly she added: "Come, Jefferson—a good boy and find a cab."

They passed out of the gardens by the Hotel de la Paix, and they proceeded to the Hotel de l'Athenaeum on the same mission. He had still twenty-five minutes before dinner time, and he was not alone in the world. To hide the embarrassment his gratification he said: "I'll be pulled out of my watch and exclaimed:

stead of going directly to his hotel, he sat down at the Café de la Paix. He was thirsty, and calling for a vermouth frappe he told the garçon to bring him also the American papers.

The waiter returned with the vermouth and the newspapers. All he could find were the London Times, which he pronounced T-e-e-m-s, and some issues of the New York Herald. The papers were nearly a month old, but he did not care for that. Jefferson idly turned over the pages of the Herald. His thoughts were still running on Shirley, and he was paying little attention to what he was reading. Suddenly, however, his eyes rested on a headline which made him sit up on his seat. It read as follows:

"Judge Rosemore Impeached—Justice of the Supreme Court to Be Tried On Bribery Charges."

The dispatch, which was dated Washington two weeks back, went on to say that Judge Rosemore had been made the subject of congressional inquiry and that the result of the inquiry was so grave that a demand for impeachment would be at once sent to the senate. It added that the charges grew out of the recent decision in the Great Northwestern Mining company case, it being alleged that Judge Rosemore had accepted a large sum of money on condition of his handing down a decision favorable to the company.

Jefferson was thunderstruck. He read the dispatch over again to make sure there was no mistake. No, it was very plain—Judge Rosemore of Madison was guilty of bribery.

But his proposition, what a calamity! He paid for his vermouth and hurried away to his hotel to dress.

It was just striking 7 when he reentered the courtyard of the Grand Hotel. Shirley and Mrs. Blake were waiting for him.

"What a lovely day!" the stately Champs Elysees, past the monumental Arc de Triomphe and from there down to the Bois. All were singularly quiet. Mrs. Blake was wringing about her new gown, Shirley was tired, and Jefferson could not banish from his mind the terrible news he had just read. He avoided looking at Shirley until the latter noticed it and thought she must have offended him in some way. She was more sorry than she would have him know, for with all her apparent coyness Jefferson was rapidly becoming very indispensable to her happiness.

It was nearly 10 o'clock when they had returned to the hotel. Shirley was listening to the geyser music, weird and barbaric. Very pointedly, Shirley remarked:

"I for one preferred the music this afternoon."

"Why?" inquired Jefferson, ignoring the petulant note in her voice.

"Because the music is so reliable!" she retorted rather crossly. But she could never remain angry long, and when they said good night she whispered to Shirley:

"Are you cross with me, Jeff?"
He turned his head away, and she saw that his face was singularly drawn and sad.

"Cross—no. Good night. Good bless you!" he said, homelyly gulping down a lump that rose in his throat. Then she handed it to Shirley he passed her also a cablegram which had just come. She changed color. She did not like telegrams. She always had a dread of them, for with her sudden news was usually bad news. Could this, she thought, explain Jefferson's strange behavior? Trembling, she tore open the envelope and read:

And the Heart, and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. LONG VIGIL FOR LOVER

Plance Waited Day and Night in Station, but He Came at Last.

Springfield, Ill., June 21.—Miss Rebecca Noe, of Greensburg, Ky., arrived in the city on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern road, expecting to be met at the station by her fiancé, Mr. R. Dodd, of Springfield, and to whom she had been introduced by a letter through a Laomai man, formerly a resident of Greensburg, and who corresponds regularly with the Noe family.

The girl had never met Dodd, and had only a small tincture by which to identify him. She wore a high bow of blue satin ribbon at her breast, by which Dodd was to identify her. Dodd failed to put in an appearance at the station, though he had sent her the money with which to come to Springfield, and told her he would meet her at the station. She waited all day and all night. He came this next morning accompanied by two women, and the patience of Miss Noe was rewarded by Rev. F. M. Rogers.

PLANE MET PANAMA

Solution of the Isthmian Canal Amusement Problem. RECREATION FOR ALL HANDS.

Facilities For Many Amusements Furnished in Model Y. M. C. A. Clubhouse, New Open at Culabra, Cristobal, Empire of Georgia.

With the opening of the first Y. M. C. A. building at Culabra, in Panama, the Panama canal commission has solved completely the amusement problem for its employees, writes a Panama correspondent of the New York Herald. The encouragement of baseball has been an important factor, but this only provided for one day's recreation in each week, while the Y. M. C. A. clubhouse affords a place for the recreation at meal hours and for the evenings—the time when it is most needed. Clubhouses of uniform size have been built at Culabra, Empire of Georgia, and Cristobal, each building being commodious and fenced in with the ever present copper screening to keep out the mosquitoes.

The main structure is two stories, with spacious verandas encircling both floors. The lobby contains a reception hall, business office and soda fountain. The billiard and pool room is equipped with four tables and accommodations for spectators. An experienced attendant is in charge. The smoking, lounging and small game room is furnished with easy chairs, settees and game tables. Equipment is provided for chess, checkers, carom and card playing. It is of course understood that no gambling will be introduced. For the library, reading and writing room a 600 volume library, with books selected to meet the local needs, has been negotiated. One hundred standard magazines and papers are provided. Tables with chairs, equipment and stationery are furnished for use of members.

The entertainment hall accommodates about 300, a wide veranda space. A stereopticon and piano are included in the equipment. Lectures, musicals, entertainers and other talent, both local and imported, will be presented frequently. Local social classes are granted the use of this floor for dancing on application for certain evenings.

A committee and class room will accommodate small groups. Educational classes will be organized upon application of six or more members, with competent instructors can be obtained. The annex is connected with the main building by two glass-enclosed, two level breezeways. It contains two bowling alleys of the best grade, in charge of an attendant; shower baths, lavatories and lockers; a gymnasium with first class equipment, including parallel bars, horizontal bar adjustable for vaulting, horse, swing board, flying rings, punch bag, boxing gloves, and other sports, pulley weights for individual exercising, mats and elastic outfit of dumbbells, Indian clubs and bar bells. The grounds of the school are under the property by the commission is represented by a committee of five, who also hold an advisory relation to the entire organization. The school is appointed by the commission and consists of four canal officials and the general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of the zone. The method of conducting the work of this association is charged to the secretary and executive committee, appointed by the international committee.

ROCKEFELLER'S BIG SIGN.

Name of Oil King's Forest Hill Estate Set in Concrete.

John D. Rockefeller wants people to know where he lives when he is in Cleveland, Ohio, says the New York Times. Rockefeller has decided to make a large sign on the grass at Forest Hill, and now the words "Forest Hill" in big letters can be seen plainly from the street. The work hasn't progressed far enough to permit any one to determine how it is going to be finished. No one can get into the estate to find out. The words "Forest Hill" are cut into the grass about fifty feet from the entrance in a bare knoll, so they can be seen easily from passing street cars. Rockefeller is not a believer in signs, and the only one that he has ever tolerated is a board on the drive that entitles his house. It bears the modest request, "Please do not drive over the house." Not only has there never been a sign showing the big park's name, but there has not even been a "Keep out" or a "Keep off the grass" sign.

An Infant Mirror Writer.

A case of mirror writing has been brought to light in the Great Barrington (Mass.) public schools which is attracting considerable attention, says the Springfield Republican. Vera Coe, a five-year-old girl who attends the primary grade in the village and at first the teacher was unable to make out just what the child was doing. When any copy is given to her to write, she writes it at the right hand side of the paper, and when she finishes one word she places the writing before a mirror. It can be easily read, and the copy is surprisingly plain.

Population of Egypt.

Census returns show that the total population of Egypt, exclusive of nomad Bedouins, is 11,200,350, of whom 5,618,684 are males and 5,581,666 are females. There is an increase of nearly 1,000,000 since 1897.

St. Petersburg, June 21.—An imperial ukase has been issued proroguing the council of the empire until Nov. 13. This action follows the issuance of a manifesto early Sunday morning dissolving the duma, the lower house of the Russian parliament. The imperial ukase abolishing the duma orders that the election of members to the successor, which is to meet Nov. 14, be held under the new election law that provides against the "submergence of the educated classes by the uneducated masses."

This constitutes a virtual coup d'etat and overrides the specific provisions of the fundamental laws of the realm, solemnly proclaimed by his majesty on the eve of the convocation of the first duma, which declare that the electoral law could never be changed without the consent of parliament itself. This breach of the constitution is justified by the great law of necessity, the advisers of the emperor holding it impossible, under the existing conditions, to secure a parliament capable of co-operating harmoniously with the crown to rescue Russia from anarchy and revolution.

The dissolution of the second duma was received throughout St. Petersburg with perfect tranquility, thanks to the precautionary measures, and in no place in Russia, so far as known, were there serious disturbances. Demonstrations among St. Petersburg workers are anticipated, but the authorities are not alarmed. They profess to be chiefly apprehensive over the possibility of rioting and racial rioting in Odessa and Kiev and other cities where party feeling runs high. An outbreak of agrarian disorders in several regions of the empire is anticipated, but the public was reassured by the government to handle the situation prevails in administrative circles.

News of the dissolution reached St. Petersburg papers too late for their criticism, but the public was informed through extra Sunday morning and great posters set up by the police at all street corners concerning the dissolution of the duma, and the imperial manifesto. Little knots of readers clustered around these the whole day, attentively perusing the manifesto, the phrasing of which was calculated to appeal to the patriotism of the lower classes. Little enthusiasm or excitement, however, was evoked, and many of the readers as they turned away, spat silently upon the ground as a sign of their contempt.

The Hague Disapproves.

The Hague, June 17.—The dissolution of the duma and the promulgation of a new election system in Russia has created a profound disapprobation among the delegates at the peace conference. Although the dissolution of the duma was anticipated by those who have been closely following Russian developments in St. Petersburg, the fact that such an event should occur simultaneously with the opening of the conference was greatly deplored. There is general disapproval as to the wisdom of the dissolution.

Apprehension at Warsaw.

Warsaw, June 17.—The newspapers issued extra Sunday, spreading the news of the duma's dissolution, which has created a profound impression. The emperor's action is the subject of eager discussion, the people fearing that the new election law will exclude the Poles. The city, however, remains quiet.

Proof of the Goddard Bomb.

Boston, June 20.—The state made a dramatic production and proof of the Goddard bomb and besides offering further corroboration of the testimony of Harry Orchard against W. D. Haywood, secured a ruling under which a number of the denunciations published in the Miners' magazine, official organ of the Western Federation of Miners, will be admitted in evidence.

A Greek Town Overwhelmed.

Athens, June 19.—The Lithos river, swollen by heavy rains, overflowed and flooded the greater part of the town of Trikala, in Thessaly. More than one-third of the houses have been destroyed and it is feared there are many victims of the floods. Trikala has a population of about 22,000.

San Francisco, June 20.—If an arrangement with the prosecution, the sentence that was to have been passed upon Abraham Ruef has been postponed for another fortnight.

Ground to Pieces Under Wheels.

Kansas City, Mo., June 21.—John Callahan and Jesse Bagby, brakemen, both of Kansas City, were knocked down and left in the Kansas City Southern Air Line at Mount Washington, near here, and literally ground to pieces under the wheels.

The continent of North America is said to have been submerged four times and to have raised above the sea level again five times.

COSTA RICA.

John D. Was in a Hurry. New York, June 21.—John D. Rockefeller's automobile, in which Mr. Rockefeller was being rather hurriedly driven, was stopped by the fire department by a constable at Elms Ford and the chauffeur was subsequently fined $25 for exceeding the speed limit. Mr. Rockefeller said the fine, according to the constable the machine was making thirty miles an hour when he caught its speed over a measured course. Mr. Rockefeller explained that he was in a hurry to get home.

Conviction of Mrs. Kaufman.

Plainsville, Va., June 21.—Mrs. Emma Kaufman, wife of Moses Kaufman, for years a wealthy Shloss Kauffman, on trial in the circuit court here for the past ten days, charged with the murder of Agnes Polaris, her sixteen-year-old servant, was last night found guilty of manslaughter in the first degree.

The sawmill of the Kansas City Lumber company at Lancelade, Miss., was destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $70,000.

He Fired the Stick.

"I have fired the walking-stick I've carried over 40 years, an account of a sore that resisted every kind of treatment, until I tried Bucklen's Arnica Salve; that has healed the sore and made me a happy man," writes John Garrett, of Mills Mills, N. C. Guaranteed for Piles, Burns, etc., by Severs Drug Co., 25c.

Ambushed Their Pursuers.

Durango, Mex., June 19.—Julian Reyes, the notorious bandit, and his lieutenant, Cenobia Rodriguez, after having been ambushed by the police, ambushed a band of pursuers, killing one man instantly and fatally wounding two others in the hills near Nayar.

Sea Gives Up Its Dead.

Norfolk, Va., June 21.—A grappling party last night found the battleship Minnesota's launch and bodies of the eleven men drowned Tuesday morning in eight fathoms of water off the rip-raps.

Peace Conference Assembles.

The Hague, June 19.—Representatives of forty-six countries were present at the opening of the second peace conference today.

A Fortunate Texas.

Havana, June 17.—Bartolomeo Mao, president of Cuba during the ten year war and a candidate against Tomas Estrada in 1902, is dead.

San Francisco, June 18.—Mayor Solis was forced to resign from office by the supervisors at their meeting last evening. Supervisor James Gallagher was named as acting mayor in his place. This is the first step taken by the graft prosecution in the course of the plan to restore good government in this city.

San Francisco, June 17.—A radical change in the executive branch of San Francisco's government is being considered by the board of supervisors.

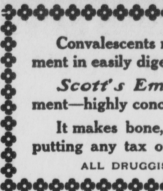

San Francisco, June 18.—Mayor Solis was forced to resign from office by the supervisors at their meeting last evening. Supervisor James Gallagher was named as acting mayor in his place. This is the first step taken by the graft prosecution in the course of the plan to restore good government in this city.

The conviction of Mayor Schmitz has at last made simple what heretofore has been a complex problem.

The charter provision making it incumbent upon the board of supervisors to appoint an acting mayor from their own number whenever the mayor becomes temporarily incapacitated from performing his duties of office can be taken advantage of because of Mayor Schmitz's imprisonment. When Prosecuting Attorney Langdon gives the word, backed with the power of the supervisors, James Gallagher or some other supervisor will be at once appointed acting mayor. Resignations will be accepted from one or two members of the board who are not only willing but actually clamoring for a chance to become free again, and a vacant place will be filled with the man chosen by the prosecutor to take the mayor's chair. Gallagher will then be ordered to resign; the board will be instructed to place the new member in his stead and the new member will then start by chopping off Chief of Police Dineen's head and then proceed down the line.

Prohibition Vs. Saloon.

I have been on the road as traveling salesman for about fifteen years and have never yet been in a town that I could see the business hurt in my line by voting out saloons. I travel principally in Western Kentucky, West Tennessee and Illinois and there are a great many dry towns in the territory, and I don't hear of any complaint as to short business on account of no saloons. On the other hand, I often hear merchants say "since saloons went out our cash business is much better. Men come in and pay for their goods, when formerly it was beggar credit." The laboring people are the ones greatly benefited, especially the colored portion of it in the southern country. It is a very common thing for a merchant to say, "You see that fellow there? When we had saloons his family were poorly cared for. Now he and his family look thrifty as any man here."

A gentleman at Fulton, Ky., operating some kind of manufacturing plant, said he worked from thirty to forty colored men. "When Fulton had saloons I never thought of trying to work on Monday morning. The negroes out gambling and spending on Saturday and Sunday nights, and never ready to go to work on Monday, and on Tuesday about one-half force, and through the week I would have to advance them money to buy provisions."

Only one or two owned their homes. Saloons have been out about two years or more now and every Monday morning I have a full force to work as any other morning in the week, and over one half my men own their homes."

Just numbers of such instances I hear of but none have I ever heard of because of saloons being about the great cry and argument in all places, when it comes to a rating question is "you take away revenue taxes to help keep up the general city expense."

That amounts to nothing when you stop to think of the amount of cash it sends out of the city to jobbers and manufacturers of liquors that live in palaces and have no other means of support, and people that cannot afford to spend their money that way that keeps it up. People that have money are generally too good business men to waste their money that way. In a town in Illinois long since one of my customers said, "we are going to vote saloons back here soon." I said "Don't do it if you want your business to hold up. He said, "if we get them back we will have ten saloons that will pay one dollar a year to the town for city revenue and that means ten thousand dollars to use towards fixing up our streets, etc." I said "but did you ever stop to think of the amount of cash money they take out of circulation that goes out of the city to trade here. These ten saloons will do from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars expense in business per year. That means ten saloons taken from $120,000 to $150,000. They will be left in your city as license money and no special benefit derived by it. These ten saloons will cost $5,000 apiece, which means about $50,000. The balance out to the jobbers and manufacturers of liquors and with poorly supported and badly abused families to mourn the loss. If that amount was spent with dry goods, groceries or clothing stores or in some other way toward supporting the families there would be more happy thoughts and less broken hearts."

But mid the snuff if you want prosperity and happiness. The business of the country to day demands sober and industrious men. Saloon proprietors themselves speak with prodigious of a bar tender that does not drink. There are some that don't, especially on the coast where there is a complex problem. The charter provision making it incumbent upon the board of supervisors to appoint an acting mayor from their own number whenever the mayor becomes temporarily incapacitated from performing his duties of office can be taken advantage of because of Mayor Schmitz's imprisonment. When Prosecuting Attorney Langdon gives the word, backed with the power of the supervisors, James Gallagher or some other supervisor will be at once appointed acting mayor. Letter From Florida.

Editor Breckenridge News—

After a residence of some six months in Florida I ought to be able to give you some news of this southern part of the world. Hillsborough Farm, our present abode, is a large, new house some two years old; pleasantly situated among a grove of scattering pines and scrubby oaks, is 100 feet wide and 100 feet long, with a double 10 foot porch on either side the full length of the house, with a large hall above and below; also a wide hall at right angles through the center of the house. The dining room is capable of seating comfortably 200 people; there is preaching here twice a month on every first and third Sunday, and prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

There are a dozen boarders here and no contagious disease in the whole house. They all look well and eat hearty and are ready dressed. It makes one wonder why they are here. But it is a nice quiet place, and believed to be as healthy as any where in the world with as little sickness in the surrounding country which is thickly settled. This farm is very large and the nicest kept orange grove in all the surrounding country. But owing to a severe drought over seven months, confined to Florida alone, which was never known before, the vegetable gardens have suffered greatly, and the orange trees have not bloomed making the latter crop a failure in Florida, and a great loss financially to the state, but at this writing the rain is quite general.

This big house and farm are presided over by Mr. C. H. Shannon and his estimable wife, who have a kind and generous father and mother to the afflicted. Mr. Shannon is a middle aged man, possessed of wonderful energy and industry, and like the writer, a great smoker. He has a piano in the large hall which might be termed a parlor, making the piano sound as though in a cave.

While the place is quiet enough, we have much that is interesting. The big Tampa Northern railroad, a new road just being completed to its northern terminus, runs about two hundred yards from the west end of the house, and the Tampa street cars pass some seventy-five yards from the house on the east side every half hour or better.

THE CHILDREN LIKE IT KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

THE BEST FRIENDS OF PE-RU-NA ARE THE MOTHERS AND CHILDREN

Per-na Should Be Kept In Every Household

Where There Are Little Children.

Per-na should be kept in the house all the time. Don't wait until the child is sick, then send to a drug store. But, have Per-na on hand—accept no substitute.

Children are especially liable to acute catarrh. Indeed, most of the affections of childhood are catarrh.

All forms of sore throat, quinsy, croup, hoarseness, laryngitis, etc., are but different phases of catarrh.

Per-na contains no narcotics.

One reason why Per-na has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind. Per-na, if taken according to printed directions, is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. It does not produce temporary results, but it is permanent in its effect.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh.

Mrs. F. Brookman, 818 Meade street, Appleton, Wis., writes:

"I have never had a return of the catarrh, which had made me so miserable and unhappy before I began taking Per-na."

"I would not be without it in the house, now."

"I have a baby boy, two years old, to whom I give Per-na for a cold, and my husband also takes Per-na."

"I thank you and wish you well."—Mrs. F. Brookman.

No Doctor Required.

Mr. Edward Otto, 267 De Soto street, St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"I cannot say enough for Per-na. It has done great work in my family, especially for my oldest boy. We had doctor with three or four different doctors and they did not seem to do him any good."

"We gave up hopes of cure, and so did they, but we pulled him through on Per-na."

"We had several doctors and they said they could do no more for him, so we tried Per-na as a last resort, and it did the work. Since then we keep it in the house all the time, and no doctor is required."—Edward Otto.

There are a multitude of homes where Per-na has been used off and on for twenty years.

Such a thing could not be possible if Per-na contained any narcotics.

The Benefit Which the Children of the United States Have Received From Per-na Can Never Be Put Into Words.

The chronic ailments it has prevented, the suffering it has mitigated, will never be fully recorded.

But at least this much can be said that the coming generation owes a great debt to Per-na, for it is in the tender years of youth that slight ailments are liable to develop into lasting diseases, thus blasting the whole career of the individual.

The mothers who are bringing up their children today to believe in Per-na are speaking from their experience.

These children brought up to believe in Per-na from the start, will, when they become heads of families themselves, see Per-na with unquestioning faith.

A Child's Life Saved.

Mr. G. H. Farmer, New Martinsville, W. Va., writes:

"Our little son, Harry, is well and healthy now and we think if we do as you directed to, he will keep his health and grow strong."

"We know that our little son's life was saved by your wonderful medicine, Per-na, and we shall always praise Per-na and use it in our family when needed."

"Should I have any more catarrhal trouble in our family, we shall always write to you for treatment."

Mr. W. F. Doring, Mt. Vernon, Mo., writes:

"I have used Per-na to my entire satisfaction and am exceedingly well pleased with the results, having suffered greatly with catarrh of the stomach."

When Sickness Comes to the Little Ones

It is the Mother Who Chiefly Suffers.

She suffers even more than the child who happens to be sick.

Her sympathy is deeper than that of any other member of the family.

The mother looks forward with dread to the torrid heat of summer, thinking of her children who are so liable to diseases that are before them.

Spring and summer are sure to bring ailments, especially among the little folks.

It does not take a mother very long to discover that Per-na is the best friend she has in time of illness among the children.

A Multitude of Mothers

Have discovered that Per-na is their stand-by, and that in many of the ailments of spring and summer, which the children are subjected, Per-na is the remedy that will generally quickly relieve.

Whether it is spring fever or stomach derangement, whether it is indigestion or bowel disease, a catarrhal congestion of the mucous surfaces is the cause.

Per-na quickly relieves this condition of the mucous membrane. Its operation is prompt, the children do not dislike to take the medicine, it has no deleterious effects in any part of the body. It simply removes the cause of the disagreeable symptoms and restores the health.

Per-na is a household remedy for all catarrhal ailments of winter and summer, acute or chronic.

The mothers all over the United States are the best friends that Per-na has.

Mr. J. C. Sterling, of Norfolk, Va., writes:

"My daughter Alice, after taking three bottles of your Per-na is entirely cured of catarrh of the head of two years standing. We have used Per-na as a general tonic as well as for catarrh and are well pleased with it and recommend it to anybody who has catarrh."

The Mothers Hold Per-na in High Esteem.

Not only because it has cured them of their various ailments, but because it promptly rescues the children from the throes and grasp of catarrhal diseases.

We have in our files many testimonials from mothers whose children have been cured by Per-na. However, the large majority of mothers who use Per-na, we never hear from.

But we do hear from a great number of mothers who are so overjoyed at some special good they have received from Per-na that they cannot restrain their enthusiasm. They are anxious to share these benefits with other mothers.

REPORT OF COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The first session of Annual County Convention was opened with devotional services led by R. L. McGuire. Then lecture and stereoscopic views by T. C. Gebauer. Miss Naunie Lee Frayer in her winsome way told the story of David.

Tuesday morning the session opened with devotional by Rev. F. R. Roberts. We were welcomed by J. P. Hawell, Jr., who said all present represented the best of communities—those who are working for the advancement of Christian education of children.

As Rev. Graves was absent, V. G. Tibbings responded, and said he knew of no better place to be than at Hardinburg at a County Sunday School Convention.

Reading minutes of last convention was next on program. First topic called was "Our Birthright," by R. L. Oelze. He spoke first of Esau's birthright and his selling it to Jacob. He said we have a birthright greater than either Esau or Jacob, giving an excellent talk upon that subject.

In Mrs. J. W. Hughes' topic "True Aim of Sunday School Work," she took for her motto Acts 20-28. Then said: take heed of self and if we feel lack take heed of God. Next we are to take heed of our flock. The aim is to win the people to true righteousness.

Report of County Superintendent was called. None responded at time, but later received a written report from Mrs. W. J. Piggott, superintendent of teacher training, in which she reported one class at Irvington.

In conference on these reports Mr. Gebauer tried to show the necessity of all being up and doing. He read a greeting to us from Grayson County Sunday School workers, Phil. 4-8.

In his talk on Teacher Training he said every member of Sunday School should be a shepherd; that we must find the young people and the boys and girls of Breckenridge county. Bring them into the Sunday School, and when they come they must hold them, feed them on Bible truth, and to do that must have teachers' meeting and then training class. There are more than three thousand boys and girls out of Sunday School in Breckenridge county. An earnest plea was made for them.

Had splendid reports from all district secretaries. Miss Frayer before telling the Bible story of Samuel, gave her reason for telling these stories and her earnestness in so doing.

Appointment of committees.

Rev. J. W. Hughes gave benediction. Adjournment until 1:15.

Afternoon session opened with devotion by Rev. E. B. English increasing second and third division of 119 Paim.

Then report of County Secretary and Treasurer, in which fifty one schools reported 2,797 scholars with $107.27 paid to Sunday School work.

First topic called, "Winning and Holding Young Men," by Rev. B. M. Currie. He said failure of reaching young men is not in the church but in us. Must win them lovingly; cannot drive the youth of today. Do not depend on theory, but go after the boy; and to be able to hold them we must be alive ourselves. As a parting word he said, follow them, find them and feed them.

Mr. Burns in discussing "Who and What Constitutes the Sunday School," said all people constitute the Sunday School, and the what consists of good officers and teachers. He impressed the necessity of home department and cradle roll.

Miss Frayer gave a few "Essentials in Elementary Teachings." First we must all have been seen of responsibility that rests upon us; must know how much of truth must be presented. Teach clearly, plainly, thoughtfully, sweetly.

Rev. I. Cline ably discussed his topic and showed the need of denominational co-operation.

Mr. G. W. Beard gave vivid contrast of Sunday Schools fifty years ago and today.

Thirty-six schools were represented. Nine district officers, six county officers, five pastors, eight superintendents and forty teachers.

The committee on nomination made the following report: T. B. Henderson, president; R. L. Oelze, vice president; Mrs. Hollis Drane, secretary; Mrs. Bettie McGlothlin, home department; Mrs. W. J. Piggott, primary; Joel H. Pile house visitation; Prof. Warner, teacher training.

The report was received and adopted. The Committee on Resolutions offered the following report:

Resolved, That we as members of this convention and also citizens of a Christian nation, awake to a greater activity and interest in this international Sunday School work; also to its different departments and especially to the cradle roll and home department, teachers' meeting and training class.

Resolved, That a greater effort on the part of the district officers be manifest in a more thorough acquaintance with the work and make it a personal matter that we see to schools individually.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere thanks to Miss Naunie Lee Frayer and Rev. T. C. Gebauer for their most valuable services and helpful inspiration to the work.

Resolved, That we extend our thanks to the organist and choir for the happy rendering of the beautiful songs, and also the good ladies of the town who so bountifully supplied the wants of the physical man.

Resolved, That we extend to our county partners our grateful thanks for their assistance rendered us through their liberal publications.

Whereas, We have enjoyed a splendid convention. Be it further

Resolved, That we extend to our county officers our appreciation of their faithful and efficient service.

Resolved, That we send greetings to our sister county, Meade.

Acts 20:28, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves and to all the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers to feed the church of God which He hath purchased with His own blood."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreadful disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
